About Michigan Fresh Potatoes

Michigan might be best known for supplying America's potato chip industry — it ranks first in producing chipping potatoes — but growers in the Great Lakes State also supply high-quality fresh potatoes.

Whether you're looking for russets, yellows, round whites, reds, or specialty potatoes, Michigan has you covered. Michigan growers have roughly 400 million pounds of fresh potatoes to offer each year.

The state's geographic proximity to the East Coast, Southeast, and Midwest regions makes it a shorter ship than importing from the West Coast, which decreases greenhouse footprint and increases potatoes' shelf life.
